Contents

Do People Have Insight Into Their Abilities? A Metasynthesis
Ethan Zell and Zlatan Krizan 111

Beyond the Correlation Coefficient in Studies of Self-Assessment Accuracy: Commentary on Zell & Krizan (2014)
David Dunning and Erik G. Helzer 126

Submentalizing: I Am Not Really Reading Your Mind
Cecilia Heyes 131

Confronting, Representing, and Believing Counterintuitive Concepts: Navigating the Natural and the Supernatural
Jonathan D. Lane and Paul L. Harris 144

Improving Outcome of Psychosocial Treatments by Enhancing Memory and Learning
Allison G. Harvey, Jason Lee, Joseph Williams, Steven D. Hollon, Matthew P. Walker, Monique A. Thompson, and Rita Smith 161

Missed Programs (You Can’t TiVo This One): Why Psychologists Should Study Media
Bradley M. Okdie, David R. Ewoldsen, Nicole L. Muscanell, Rosanna E. Guadagno, Cassie A. Eno, John A. Velez, Robert A. Dunn, Jamie O’Mally, and Lauren Reichart Smith 180

Statistics Anxiety Update: Refining the Construct and Recommendations for a New Research Agenda
Peter K. H. Chew and Denise B. Dillon 196

Special Section: “Integrative” Comments on Abilities, Interests, and Achievements

New Ideas on Intellectual Ability, Interests, Sex Differences, and Achievement: Three “Integrative” Commentaries on Four Target Articles
David A. Sbarra 209

A General Theoretical Integrative Model of Individual Differences in Interests, Abilities, Personality Traits, and Academic and Occupational Achievement: A Commentary on Four Recent Articles
Frank L. Schmidt 211

Breadth-Based Models of Women’s Underrepresentation in STEM Fields: An Integrative Commentary on Schmidt (2011) and Nye et al. (2012)
Jeffrey M. Valla and Stephen J. Ceci 219

Interests, Gender, and Science
Virginia Valian 225